A private 2.2-acre compound in Haiku with expansive forested outlooks, ocean and mountain views. Accessed via a long driveway off a cul-de-sac and set behind an electric gate, the property offers a strong sense of arrival and privacy. Originally designed by Graham Hill (TreeHugger, LifeEdited), whose work on efficient living has been widely viewed through a TED Talk and featured in The New York Times, HGTV, and other media, the property was built as a high-functioning, real-world home combining modern design, flexible living, and independent infrastructure.
