Tucked behind a rock wall on 2.13 private acres in Orchid Land, this property doesn't announce itself, it reveals itself. Follow the driveway inward and the land opens into something that feels less like a yard and more like a living, breathing orchard with jackfruit, mango, avocado, lemon, tangerine, Surinam cherries, Brazilian cherries, guava, and coconut palms. All mature, all fruit producing. They drape over the property like a canopy that took years to cultivate.
