The home rides right on the water. Every window is ocean, every direction is horizon. Mornings start slow - Kona coffee in hand, take the swing on the lanai and just listen. Waves on the rocks below, wind through the palms, and out past the seawall, easy laughter from the surfers at the Kahaluu break. Look down, and the reef is alive underneath them, yellow tang over the coral, honu rising to breathe and gliding back along the seawall. Spinner dolphins pass most mornings, and on a winter day you may look up to a humpback breaching offshore.
